DETAILED ACTION

Response to Amendment

Claim Rejections - 35 USC § 103

The following is a quotation of 35 U.S.C. 103(a) which forms the basis for all obviousness rejections set forth in this Office action:

(a) A patent may not be obtained though the invention is not identically disclosed or described as set forth in section 102 of this title, if the differences between the subject matter sought to be patented and the prior art are such that the subject matter as a whole would have been obvious at the time the invention was made to a person having ordinary skill in the art to which said subject matter pertains. Patentability shall not be negatived by the manner in which the invention was made.

Claims 22-26 are rejected under 35 U.S.C. 103(a) as being unpatentable over Carlsson in view of Sanders, III.

Regarding claim 22 Carlsson teaches a wireless system comprising a first and a second base stations, wherein a first base station comprises memory means for storing first identification information for specifying a terminal (see col. 4, lines 54-57 and col. 9, lines 64-65). Carlsson teaches a second base station for allocating second identification information to the terminal for specifying the terminal (see col. 10, lines 41-44 & 47-50). Carlsson does not specifically teach requesting the first base station to release the first identification information stored in memory. Sanders, III teaches releasing identification information from a buffer associated with a first base station (see col. 3, lines 48-50 & 55). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the device adapt to include requesting the first base station to release the first identification information stored in memory because this would allow for the efficient operation of wireless radio devices with multiple base stations.

Art Unit: 2683

Regarding claim 23 Carlsson teaches a second base station for notifying a control apparatus in the wireless system about identification information of the second base station and the second identification information (see col. 10, lines 47-54).

Regarding claim 24 Carlsson and Sanders, III teach a device as recited in claim 22 except for a first base station that is enabled to allocate the first identification information to anther terminal in response to a request of releasing the first identification information. Sanders, III does teach identification information of a remote unit that is stored in queues associated with a particular base station (see col. 4, lines 45-48). Sanders, III does teach allocating first identification information in response to releasing first identification information (see col. 5, lines 21-23). ). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the device adapt to include a first base station that is enabled to allocate the first identification information to anther terminal in response to a request of releasing the first identification information because this would allow for avoidance of interference in control channel signals among a plurality of base stations.

Regarding claim 25 Carlsson teaches allocating identification information to a terminal in a wireless system (see col. 5, lines 5-7). Carlsson teaches storing first identification information in a first base station for specifying the terminal (see col. 4, lines 55-58). Carlsson teaches a second base station for allocating second identification information to the terminal for specifying the terminal and storing second identification information in a second base station for verification (see col. 10, lines 41-44 & 47-50). Carlsson does not specifically teach requesting the first base station to release the first identification information. Sanders, III teaches releasing identification information from a buffer associated with a first base station (see col. 3, lines 48-50 & 55). It would have been obvious to one of ordinary skill in the art at the time the invention was made to make the device adapt to include requesting the first base station to release the first identification information stored in memory because this would allow for the efficient operation of wireless radio devices with multiple base stations.

Regarding claim 26 Carlsson and Sanders, II teach a device as recited in claim 23 and is rejected given the same reasoning as above.

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 22-26 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.

Conclusion

The prior art made of record and not relied upon is considered pertinent to applicant's disclosure.

Takemura U.S Patent No. 6,163,695 discloses a mobile communication system and mobile communication method thereof.

Alldredge U.S Patent No. 6,181,931 discloses a method and apparatus for dynamic address allocation in a wireless communication system.

Applicant's arguments with respect to claims 22-26 have been considered but are moot in view of the new ground(s) of rejection.
